PORR and AMM are building the first NH-certified day care centre in Bremen

A photovoltaic system has been installed on at least 50 % of the roof surfaces. DGNB Gold certification is also planned. 'We are delighted with this order in two respects. The project harmonises perfectly with PORR's Green and Lean sustainability strategy,' explains PORR Regional Manager North Björn Motzkus. In the interests of sustainability, the construction team decided not to use diesel to heat the building and instead chose air source heat pumps. The impact on the environment was also taken into account: An existing stand of trees on the site was protected and preserved, which is why the area was fenced off and not allowed to be entered. Irrigation was provided by the client. Amobile heat pump was used in the KITA Osterholz, which provides reliable heating even at temperatures well below freezing. 'The fact that the air heat pump is fossil-free and energy-efficient is in line with both PORR's sustainability strategy and the client's ambition to build Bremen's first KITA with NH certification,' says Burwinkel. The tender and calculation phase was already characterised by mutual trust. 'As a general contractor, we have the primary duty to deliver an all-round carefree package. By ensuring compliance with costs, deadlines and quality, the customer has full planning security.'
