Turnkey completion under the one roof

Two coal mining operations opened up in the area. When the Wesel-Datteln Canal was constructed to transport coal to the Ruhr region, the course of the Lippe was rerouted 400m to the north, and this artificial waterway now runs right through the city centre. After the coal mines closed down, Dorsten developed a new image as a service centre with superb leisure opportunities. The revitalisation of the city centre to include an attractive mix of offerings and diverse business sectors was high on the agenda, and the MERCADEN® played a significant role in this new image.

A top shopping location between the city's historic centre and the canal

The shopping centre is located on the edge of Dorsten's pedestrian zone and is bordered by the Wesel-Datteln Canal to the rear. Like the Lippetor Centre, established on the same site in the 80s, the MERCADEN® provides pedestrians and cyclists with direct access to the city's historic centre via the Hochsteden Bridge.
